Where could studying Theology and Religious Studies take you?

Theology and Religious Studies (TRS) prepares you for a world shaped by technological change, global connection, and deep differences in belief and identity. Here's how...

What you'll learn

- How beliefs shape individuals and societies
- Ethical and philosophical questions
- Religious traditions
- Religion's role in public life
- Textual analysis
- Languages (E.g. Koinē Greek, Hebrew, Quranic Arabic)

The big questions

TRS gives you the space to explore the deep questions that shape human life seriously and with curiosity, like these:

- What is a good life?
- Why do people search for meaning?
- How do ideas of justice, dignity, and personhood develop?

Skills you'll develop

- Critical analysis
- Clear communication
- Careful argument

Where it leads

With these skills, TRS graduates can go on to be anything from:

- Policy adviser
- Communications specialist
- Journalist
- Teacher
- Lawyer
- Civil servant
- Consultant
- NGO or public service employee

Why it matters now...

Understanding how belief shapes identity, language, and conflict is increasingly important. In a digital world shaped by social media and misinformation TRS develops religious literacy: the ability to interpret beliefs carefully without reducing them to stereotypes.
